Korean Studies Programme at HKU

The Korean Studies Programme at the University of Hong Kong

provides a multi-faceted and interdisciplinary approach to the study of Korean language and culture. Major and Minor students in the Programme not only study the Korean language but also learn about the country's history, culture, and society, and will develop a comprehensive understanding of Korea in a global context.

This exhibition is based on final-year student projects from the Korean Studies Research Seminar. From January to May 2023, students conducted individualized research projects related to Korea, drawing their academic learning from their experience at the University of Hong Kong. Each student chose their topic for the research and produced a long research paper. These posters are highlights of their research projects. This exhibition showcases samples of their work in simplified ways. The research seminar was supervised by Dr. Su Yun Kim of the Korean Studies Programme, Faculty of Arts.
